Joseph L. Mejaly

Senior Vice President, Operations, Sales, Strategic Planning and Marketing
DENSO Products and Services Americas, Inc.

Joseph Mejaly is senior vice president of the Operations, Sales, Strategic Planning and Marketing departments for DENSO Products and Services Americas, Inc., headquartered in Long Beach, Calif. As senior vice president, he oversees operations, communications and the development and execution of the sales expansion strategy for all DENSO aftermarket products and services, as well as the company's nonautomotive robotics, air conditioning and heating, and automated data capture divisions.

Mejaly joined DENSO in 2015 with more than 30 years of experience in the automotive industry, including top management positions in automotive manufacturing companies in the metropolitan Detroit area. He rose to CEO at AxleTech International, a global manufacturer and supplier of axles, suspension systems and related components for commercial vehicles and heavy-duty equipment. He previously served as president of the Worldwide Aftermarket and Trailer Business group of Meritor Inc., a global supplier of drivetrain, mobility, braking and aftermarket products and technology. For three years, Mejaly was president of his own strategic planning firm, JLJ&H Consulting LLC.

During his career, he has twice co-chaired the industry's leading aftermarket conference, Heavy Duty Aftermarket Week (HDAW). He is a past member of the Heavy Duty Business Forum of the Heavy Duty Manufacturers Association (HDMA), a division of the Motor and Equipment Manufacturers Association (MEMA), which represents more than 1,000 companies that manufacture vehicles components and systems for the original equipment and aftermarket industries.

A native of Michigan, Mejaly holds a Bachelor of Science in marketing from Western Michigan University.
